New Study Confirms: Staldren® Completely Degrades African Swine Fever

Jorenku A/S, a leading Danish manufacturer of hygiene products, is thrilled to announce the promising results from a new Chinese university study. The study shows that Staldren® - a dry disinfecting powder produced by Jorenku A/S in Denmark - has an impressive ability to completely degrade both African Swine Fever Virus (ASFV) and Porcine Epidemic Diarrhea Virus (PEDV).

The Results in Brief

ASFV: Staldren® demonstrates its formidable effectiveness by completely degrading ASFV after just one hour of interaction. The study thus confirms that Staldren® is a new method for combating this serious threat.

PEDV: With just 1 gram of Staldren®, complete degradation of PEDV was achieved in just one hour, highlighting the product's remarkable capacity to also handle this virus.

Table 1 Results of "Staldren®" treatment of PEDV solution for 1 hour.

Groups	Ct value
Control subjects	23.3
Experimental group	40

Note: For the convenience of statistical data, the absence of values is indicated by a Ct value = 40.

Table 2 Results of "Staldren®" treatment of ASFV nucleic acid for 1 hour.

Groups	ASFV nucleic acid concentration	Ct value
Control groups	10 <sup>-1</sup>	20.6
	10 <sup>-2</sup>	25.3
Experimental groups	10 <sup>-1</sup>	40
	10 <sup>-2</sup>	40

Note: For statistical convenience no values are expressed as Ct value = 40.

Global Perspective for the Pig Production Sector

Johnni Pedersen, CEO of Jorenku A/S, states, "Staldren® is superior in degrading both ASFV and PEDV, so naturally we are very excited about the results of this independent study. It confirms Staldren®'s potential as an effective solution against African Swine Fever, which is a serious threat to pig producers globally."

During the coming months, Jorenku A/S looks forward to sharing the study results at the Danish tradefair NutriFair, as well as at international trade fairs and with distributors worldwide.
